

Welcome to a monthly report on Pax Dei for Nuba's work with the Diocese of Kadugli and the people of Sudan's Nuba Mountains.

Like what you read? Subscribe to Nuba Bulletin or forward this email to a friend.

This Month: Making Peace

It is a hot day in dry season, but leaders across Nuba have travelled to the offices of the Diocese of Kadugli nonetheless. They've come to learn from Bishop Andudu Elnail about how to work toward peace.

Bishop Andudu has drawn from his education at Eastern Mennonite University to create a week-long workshop to help community leaders learn how to become effective peacemakers. Workshop participants apply the ways and wisdom of Jesus to seek reconciliation and address root causes of conflict after decades of civil war.

In 2022, Pax Dei for Nuba provided $20,000 to support this effort and will continue this work into 2023 so that Bishop Andudu can carry these workshops into conflict-prone areas across the region.

In the workshop pictured above, leaders attended from Christian churches, Muslim mosques, tribal authorities, and local government. After spending a day learning the theories behind conflict resolution, they spent the second day identifying real conflicts in the community and seeking resolution.

Give to Nuba

[Top left]: Advertising for the workshop emphasizes Conflict Analysis, Mediation, and how to understand Secularism.

[Top right]: Leaders participate in a workshop.

[Bottom]: New diocesan offices (built through a grant from Relay Trust) provide a welcoming venue for community leaders who travel great distances by foot, motorcycle, or car. Support from Pax Dei for Nuba covers food for the week and transportation fuel costs, which exceed $25/liter.

